

PROJECTS

WORK

The Best Use of Decorative Lighting in a Workplace Project

WINNER

Revolution - Portman Square House

Revolution was created to bring a bold sense of energy and drama to the Cushman Wakefield London Headquarters. Suspended through an eight-storey atrium space it provides a sense of dynamism and poise for the onlookers across the eight office floors, with each illuminated circular form balanced as if frozen in time. As viewers move from floor via the high-speed lifts or walk underneath the spoked nature of each ring provide a moiré effect, creating movement and energy that transform the communal atrium interior designed by Anvari design.

The entire sculpture can be lowered electronically to the ground floor and folds into a specially made cradle to allow maintenance to the glass roof above; one seriously adventurous feat of light engineering to create a graceful landmark sculpture.

Ben Rigby: "We were delighted to take part in the darc awards, and over the moon to have won three categories with our sculptural works. Being voted for by our contemporaries makes these awards extra special; thank you to all who voted for us."

Project:

Revolution - Portman Square House

Location:

London, UK

Client:

Anvari Design

Interior Design:

Anvari Design

Lighting Design:

Haberdashery